Director's Note

Deceit, revenge and unparalleled couture - no, it's not an episode of The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills, rather it's the story of a certain jilted, wannabe "mansion wife" of Austrian high society. In this premiere of Jacques Lamarre's "The Baroness", we are whirled into one of that mansion's guest bedrooms as Elsa desperately plots to somehow become the lady of the house, despite being unceremoniously passed over by Captain Von Trapp for that flibbertigibbet singing nun in training, Maria. And, as we all know, Maria is quite the problem to solve. Perhaps Rolf, the 17-going-on-18 messenger boy/Nazi Youth can help the baroness stake her claim. There's highjinks, lascivious reciprocity, and much to be revealed about these lesser known characters. Turns out we've been following the wrong storyline all these years. Who knew?
